

TEAM AS SUPPORT: A HIGH-IMPACT PRACTICE

Facilitated by Lea Fridman (English)

What if every student in your class had 4 or 5 of their peers supporting them? What if at this moment of crisis when students suffer isolation and more, they had a team behind them whose job was to encourage, create bonds, be there for each and every member of the team?

This is a pedagogy of hope and of possibility. It is a pedagogy that emphasizes the quality of relationship within permanent teams. And it is a pedagogy grounded in research that demonstrates that generosity, kindness and trust within teams are the factors that create the highest levels of performance.

You can help your students through the crisis of the pandemic using a method that, at the same time, improves their academic and intellectual outcomes! Strong teams are like strong families: they give their members the resources and support to succeed.
